

Mending

Poem by Betsy Unger

In this torn world,
isn't repair our only true work?
Aren't we at our most beautiful bent over in darkness needle of steel
thread of light
fingers determined to catch the edge of some scrap of cloak still glorious in memory or hope?